

AMUSEMENTS.

Wood's Theater.
Corner Fourth and Jefferson streets.
DUPRE & FLETCHER, Managers.
J. A. DUPRE, Acting Manager.
J. FLETCHER, Musical Director.
Fourth night of the accomplished actress, MRS. MARIE ZOE.
ON THURSDAY EVENING, NOV. 22, WILL BE PERFORMED THE GREAT PLAY OF THE MYSTERY OF THE WISDOM-WISH.
To conclude with the beautiful farce of WIZARD KIFF, or THE MANAGER OF RICE.
Admission: 25c, 50c, 75c, 1.00. Box seats 1.50. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 7:15.

Louisville Theater.

CORNER OF FOURTH AND GREEN STREETS.
CART & CLAYTON, Proprietors and Managers.
D. A. CART, Manager.
J. CLAYTON, Musical Director.
Fourth night of the talented artist, MATILDA HERON, in the great play of THE MYSTERY OF THE WISDOM-WISH.
As originally performed by Matilda Heron, with unbounded success.
To conclude with the beautiful farce of WIZARD KIFF, or THE MANAGER OF RICE.
Admission: 25c, 50c, 75c, 1.00. Box seats 1.50. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 7:15.

MASONIC TEMPLE.

Second Engagement this Season!
Saturday Evening, November 24th.
FOR NEW NIGHTS ONLY.
THE REAL GENUINE AND CELEBRATED
PROF. W. J. MALLISTER,
THE WORLD-RENOUNDED
WIZARD
OF THE GREAT WEST
IN HIS PHYSICOMATHEM
ILLUSORY MIRACLES!
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASKED BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

Two splendid prizes to be awarded.

For the first prize, a valuable present given away each night.
For the second prize, a valuable present given away each night.
127 beautiful and valuable presents given away each night.
127 cards of admission 30c. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Curtain will rise at 8:15. For particulars see small bills.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL.

TO BE GIVEN AT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
Thursday Evening, Nov. 24, 1864.
MARRIAGE—Henry Siskard, Simon Forman, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes and John Skers.
Grand Masked Ball,
—AT—
ODD FELLOWS' HALL,
On Monday Evening, Nov. 27, 1864.

SCOTT, KEEN & CO.,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

MEN'S, YOUTHS' & BOYS' FINE CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS.

Corner Sixth and Main Streets, Louisville, Ky.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

FOR THE INFORMATION AND BENEFIT OF THE TRADE GENERALLY, THE SUBSCRIBER WOULD respectfully call attention to the new collection of

WHOLE AND GROUND SPICES, of all kinds, in bulk; Roasted Coffee and Rye, Choice Mustard; the well-known Siberian Breakfast Coffee; Electric Yeast Powder; Mason's Challenge Blacking; Best Stove Polish, &c.

CHAS. J. BOUCHER,

Corner Sixth and Green Streets, Louisville, Ky.

HINZEN & ROSEN,

PIANO-FORTE MANUFACTURERS, Also, Agents for Mason & Hamlin's Cabinet Organs, the best in market.

NORTH SIDE MARKET STREET, BETWEEN SIXTH AND SEVENTH, LOUISVILLE, KY.

AT A PUBLIC SALE, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS AT REASONABLE PRICES.

BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

At J. W. Shockey's Stable, Corner of Market and Second streets.

HAVING DETERMINED TO CURTAIL MY BUSINESS, I HAVE TO SELL AT A PUBLIC SALE, AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Government Sale. ON THE 10th INST. AT 11 O'CLOCK, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC SALE, AT THE ORDINANCE REPAIR SHOP, CORNER OF MARKET AND SECOND STREETS, A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF PIANOS, AS FOLLOWS:

Public Sale. BY C. C. SPENCER, On Saturday, November 24, 1864.

TELEGRAPHIC.

The War Democratic Convention at New York.

Proclamation of Governor Seymour From the Army of the Potomac.

Constant Firing Along the Lines.

The Official Vote of Pennsylvania.

Late Intelligence from Mexico.

Occupation of Matamoros by Mejia Confirmed.

A Severe Earthquake at Laxenia.

Sinking of the Steamer Universal.

Twelve Rebel Prisoners and Five Deck Passengers Drowned.

Conspiracy on Foot to set Fire to the Principal Northern Cities.

The Trial of Col. North Postponed.

Efforts to Prepare the Pardon of Ferry and Donahue.

Cavalry Skirmish at Camden, Ark.

Arrival of Exchanged Prisoners at Cairo.

Rebel Raiders at Belfast, Maine.

Late News from Southern Sources.

New York, Nov. 2.

At the War Democratic Convention yesterday, the following resolutions were adopted unanimously:

WHEREAS, A crisis has arisen in the history of our country, the result of which will determine the fate of our Union, and the rights of our people;

Resolved, That we Democrats will sustain the war as long as it shall be necessary to preserve the Union, and to restore the rights of our people;

Resolved, That we will not shrink from the sacrifice of blood and treasure, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

Resolved, That we will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party, and will not be deterred by the opposition of any class or party;

"GOING ALONE."

With eyes in the sunny blue of the sky, with light in the merry blue eyes, with laughter as clear as a bell, a laugh of delight and surprise, all the while she was saying to him, "I shall never, as long as I live, leave you."

Now, when Mlle. Cecile spoke in this way, she was telling the truth; but not all the truth, for she was giving her father to understand that she had no affection for him, and that she never intended to marry. M. Coulincourt had made an idol of his daughter; after his wife's death he had consecrated his life to this child, and gradually he had grown to look on all who sought to share her affection with jealousy, such as almost a lover might have felt.

But with all this, M. Coulincourt knew that every girl in France is expected to be married between the ages of eighteen and twenty; an old maid is a disgrace in France, and all the wife's and her own relations were importunate for him to find a match for his daughter. She was beautiful, young and charming, and possessed a handsome dowry; pretensions were not wanting. M. Coulincourt felt that if a doom threatened him, he was afraid to talk to Cecile on the subject, so the positive declaration he had drawn from his daughter that morning caused him more happiness than he had known for many years. But after all it was an Eve-like, womanish answer she gave him; he did love one more better than her father, and the happiness of her life depended on her marriage.

Many years before, Cecile, then being only six years old, was sitting in her father's carriage, driving along the high road in a country place where her father had hired a residence for the summer, had spied a boy three or four years older than herself, sitting on the way-side crying. Cecile, who was leaning out of the carriage, and the next minute she was by the side of the child, inquiring into his grief, and forcing into his hand the cakes and cherries with which she had been supplied.

Cecile had been a blessing to him. Coulincourt would say, "from the moment her aunt laid her in my arms. I owe the prosperity of my house to her, for she gave me Adrian."

Adrian felt the deepest gratitude to both the merchant and his daughter. He was a fine, generous nature, that does not shrink from obligation. But the sentiment he felt for his father's daughter, as he grew older, naturally assumed a different aspect. To both he was devoted; but as he saw her expand into loveliness, both in mind and person, he confessed he came to love Cecile passionately, deeply. But he concealed his passion as he would have concealed a crime, to seek an alliance which was so infinitely beneath what Cecile had a right to expect. But Cecile had not been as blind as her father to Adrian's feelings, neither was she so stupid as to suppose that she had made up her mind to marry Adrian, and she had with her woman's tact discovered his love for her.

On the day of her explanation with her father, Cecile contrived, on some vain pretext—she often undertook commissions for her father—summon Adrian to her presence. She had determined to make him declare his sentiments, for she felt that the time had come when she would have to combat all her relations determined on keeping her to herself.

Adrian was so timid in her presence that she felt she had to encourage him; so after a little insignificant conversation, Cecile said to him, "I have seen the letter your father addressed to her father by Colonel de Lacy."

"I have," said Cecile, "and I am thinking of it. I have forgotten it, I was thinking of it."

"What is it about?"

"Well—"

"Now, sir, if you dare to have a thought you have not communicated to me you had better look out!"

"Indeed, I have not."

"Let me cross-examine you."

"Well—"

"Are your affairs in order?"

"Yes."

"Has no house where you had money failed?"

"None."

"Are you prepared to meet all your notes?"

"Yes."

"Have you made any bad speculations?"

"No."

"Are you not satisfied with Adrian?"

"Absurd; you know Adrian is devoted to me heart and soul."

"Well, then, what were you thinking about?"

"You."

"Me, about me, and you dare look serious, almost sad when you are thinking of me? This is worse than anything. Pray, what thoughts could I inspire you with that could make you look so sad and serious?"

"Thoughts inspired by last night's ball."

"Why, they should be merry thoughts; wasn't it the very queen of the ball? Didn't I dance with you there, and were you not surrounded by all the young men in the room?"

"Yes, greeted I was, and overwhelmed with wine and refreshments handed to me on all sides, and that has made me melancholy, for I am afraid of losing the treasure which I have told these many years."

"Why? Do you think these young gentlemen were robbers in disguise, or ain't you sure of the very queen of the ball?"

"Cecile, Cecile, you are laughing at your father; the treasure I mean is yourself."

"Have those men any intention of carrying me off? What a pity they should be such dangerous characters, for they walk so well."

"Don't pretend to misunderstand me, Cecile, you know exactly what I mean. You knew that you were admired by everybody, and you know what is likely to follow this admiration of a parcel of young men."

"No, I don't."

"It is too bad to think that after a life spent in loving you, in making you what you are—beautiful, amiable, good, accomplished—just because you are a girl, I am to give you, yes, give you up to a domestic invader called a son-in-law, a man who will carry you off from me, a man who will presume to love you, and what is worse, a man you may probably love to love yourself."

"But all this is imaginary. I'm ashamed of you; one would think you were a young romantic girl."

"Imaginary, is it? What do you think has happened this morning?"

"Has there been an invader here already?"

"Yes, one that you have never thought of."

of, but which is the most powerful of all: I don't like him, and I won't have him."

Monsieur Coulincourt rose, and clasping his daughter to his heart, heaved a deep sigh of relief.

"I thought you would want to get married; all young girls are said to want to get married."

"But they have not such fathers as I have; now come to breakfast, and make yourself perfectly easy on the score of love, for I shall never, as long as I live, leave you."

Now, when Mlle. Cecile spoke in this way, she was telling the truth; but not all the truth, for she was giving her father to understand that she had no affection for him, and that she never intended to marry. M. Coulincourt had made an idol of his daughter; after his wife's death he had consecrated his life to this child, and gradually he had grown to look on all who sought to share her affection with jealousy, such as almost a lover might have felt.

But with all this, M. Coulincourt knew that every girl in France is expected to be married between the ages of eighteen and twenty; an old maid is a disgrace in France, and all the wife's and her own relations were importunate for him to find a match for his daughter. She was beautiful, young and charming, and possessed a handsome dowry; pretensions were not wanting. M. Coulincourt felt that if a doom threatened him, he was afraid to talk to Cecile on the subject, so the positive declaration he had drawn from his daughter that morning caused him more happiness than he had known for many years. But after all it was an Eve-like, womanish answer she gave him; he did love one more better than her father, and the happiness of her life depended on her marriage.

Many years before, Cecile, then being only six years old, was sitting in her father's carriage, driving along the high road in a country place where her father had hired a residence for the summer, had spied a boy three or four years older than herself, sitting on the way-side crying. Cecile, who was leaning out of the carriage, and the next minute she was by the side of the child, inquiring into his grief, and forcing into his hand the cakes and cherries with which she had been supplied.

Cecile had been a blessing to him. Coulincourt would say, "from the moment her aunt laid her in my arms. I owe the prosperity of my house to her, for she gave me Adrian."

Adrian felt the deepest gratitude to both the merchant and his daughter. He was a fine, generous nature, that does not shrink from obligation. But the sentiment he felt for his father's daughter, as he grew older, naturally assumed a different aspect. To both he was devoted; but as he saw her expand into loveliness, both in mind and person, he confessed he came to love Cecile passionately, deeply. But he concealed his passion as he would have concealed a crime, to seek an alliance which was so infinitely beneath what Cecile had a right to expect. But Cecile had not been as blind as her father to Adrian's feelings, neither was she so stupid as to suppose that she had made up her mind to marry Adrian, and she had with her woman's tact discovered his love for her.

On the day of her explanation with her father, Cecile contrived, on some vain pretext—she often undertook commissions for her father—summon Adrian to her presence. She had determined to make him declare his sentiments, for she felt that the time had come when she would have to combat all her relations determined on keeping her to herself.

Adrian was so timid in her presence that she felt she had to encourage him; so after a little insignificant conversation, Cecile said to him, "I have seen the letter your father addressed to her father by Colonel de Lacy."

"I have," said Cecile, "and I am thinking of it. I have forgotten it, I was thinking of it."

"What is it about?"

"Well—"

"Now, sir, if you dare to have a thought you have not communicated to me you had better look out!"

"Indeed, I have not."

"Let me cross-examine you."

"Well—"

"Are your affairs in order?"

"Yes."

"Has no house where you had money failed?"

"None."

"Are you prepared to meet all your notes?"

"Yes."

"Have you made any bad speculations?"

"No."

"Are you not satisfied with Adrian?"

"Absurd; you know Adrian is devoted to me heart and soul."

"Well, then, what were you thinking about?"

"You."

"Me, about me, and you dare look serious, almost sad when you are thinking of me? This is worse than anything. Pray, what thoughts could I inspire you with that could make you look so sad and serious?"

"Thoughts inspired by last night's ball."

"Why, they should be merry thoughts; wasn't it the very queen of the ball? Didn't I dance with you there, and were you not surrounded by all the young men in the room?"

"Yes, greeted I was, and overwhelmed with wine and refreshments handed to me on all sides, and that has made me melancholy, for I am afraid of losing the treasure which I have told these many years."

"Why? Do you think these young gentlemen were robbers in disguise, or ain't you sure of the very queen of the ball?"

"Cecile, Cecile, you are laughing at your father; the treasure I mean is yourself."

"Have those men any intention of carrying me off? What a pity they should be such dangerous characters, for they walk so well."

"Don't pretend to misunderstand me, Cecile, you know exactly what I mean. You knew that you were admired by everybody, and you know what is likely to follow this admiration of a parcel of young men."

"No, I don't."

"It is too bad to think that after a life spent in loving you, in making you what you are—beautiful, amiable, good, accomplished—just because you are a girl, I am to give you, yes, give you up to a domestic invader called a son-in-law, a man who will carry you off from me, a man who will presume to love you, and what is worse, a man you may probably love to love yourself."

"But all this is imaginary. I'm ashamed of you; one would think you were a young romantic girl."

"Imaginary, is it? What do you think has happened this morning?"

"Has there been an invader here already?"

"Yes, one that you have never thought of."

of, but which is the most powerful of all: I don't like him, and I won't have him."

Monsieur Coulincourt rose, and clasping his daughter to his heart, heaved a deep sigh of relief.

"I thought you would want to get married; all young girls are said to want to get married."

"But they have not such fathers as I have; now come to breakfast, and make yourself perfectly easy on the score of love, for I shall never, as long as I live, leave you."

Now, when Mlle. Cecile spoke in this way, she was telling the truth; but not all the truth, for she was giving her father to understand that she had no affection for him, and that she never intended to marry. M. Coulincourt had made an idol of his daughter; after his wife's death he had consecrated his life to this child, and gradually he had grown to look on all who sought to share her affection with jealousy, such as almost a lover might have felt.

But with all this, M. Coulincourt knew that every girl in France is expected to be married between the ages of eighteen and twenty; an old maid is a disgrace in France, and all the wife's and her own relations were importunate for him to find a match for his daughter. She was beautiful, young and charming, and possessed a handsome dowry; pretensions were not wanting. M. Coulincourt felt that if a doom threatened him, he was afraid to talk to Cecile on the subject, so the positive declaration he had drawn from his daughter that morning caused him more happiness than he had known for many years. But after all it was an Eve-like, womanish answer she gave him; he did love one more better than her father, and the happiness of her life depended on her marriage.

Many years before, Cecile, then being only six years old, was sitting in her father's carriage, driving along the high road in a country place where her father had hired a residence for the summer, had spied a boy three or four years older than herself, sitting on the way-side crying. Cecile, who was leaning out of the carriage, and the next minute she was by the side of the child, inquiring into his grief, and forcing into his hand the cakes and cherries with which she had been supplied.

Cecile had been a blessing to him. Coulincourt would say, "from the moment her aunt laid her in my arms. I owe the prosperity of my house to her, for she gave me Adrian."

Adrian felt the deepest gratitude to both the merchant and his daughter. He was a fine, generous nature, that does not shrink from obligation. But the sentiment he felt for his father's daughter, as he grew older, naturally assumed a different aspect. To both he was devoted; but as he saw her expand into loveliness, both in mind and person, he confessed he came to love Cecile passionately, deeply. But he concealed his passion as he would have concealed a crime, to seek an alliance which was so infinitely beneath what Cecile had a right to expect. But Cecile had not been as blind as her father to Adrian's feelings, neither was she so stupid as to suppose that she had made up her mind to marry Adrian, and she had with her woman's tact discovered his love for her.

On the day of her explanation with her father, Cecile contrived, on some vain pretext—she often undertook commissions for her father—summon Adrian to her presence. She had determined to make him declare his sentiments, for she felt that the time had come when she would have to combat all her relations determined on keeping her to herself.

Adrian was so timid in her presence that she felt she had to encourage him; so after a little insignificant conversation, Cecile said to him, "I have seen the letter your father addressed to her father by Colonel de Lacy."

"I have," said Cecile, "and I am thinking of it. I have forgotten it, I was thinking of it."

"What is it about?"

"Well—"

"Now, sir, if you dare to have a thought you have not communicated to me you had better look out!"

"Indeed, I have not."

"Let me cross-examine you."

"Well—"

"Are your affairs in order?"

"Yes."

"Has no house where you had money failed?"

"None."

"Are you prepared to meet all your notes?"

"Yes."

"Have you made any bad speculations?"

"No."

"Are you not satisfied with Adrian?"

"Absurd; you know Adrian is devoted to me heart and soul."

"Well, then, what were you thinking about?"

"You."

"Me, about me, and you dare look serious, almost sad when you are thinking of me? This is worse than anything. Pray, what thoughts could I inspire you with that could make you look so sad and serious?"

"Thoughts inspired by last night's ball."

"Why, they should be merry thoughts; wasn't it the very queen of the ball? Didn't I dance with you there, and were you not surrounded by all the young men in the room?"

"Yes, greeted I was, and overwhelmed with wine and refreshments handed to me on all sides, and that has made me melancholy, for I am afraid of losing the treasure which I have told these many years."

"Why? Do you think these young gentlemen were robbers in disguise, or ain't you sure of the very queen of the ball?"

"Cecile, Cecile, you are laughing at your father; the treasure I mean is yourself."

"Have those men any intention of carrying me off? What a pity they should be such dangerous characters, for they walk so well."

"Don't pretend to misunderstand me, Cecile, you know exactly what I mean. You knew that you were admired by everybody, and you know what is likely to follow this admiration of a parcel of young men."

"No, I don't."

"It is too bad to think that after a life spent in loving you, in making you what you are—beautiful, amiable, good, accomplished—just because you are a girl, I am to give you, yes, give you up to a domestic invader called a son-in-law, a man who will carry you off from me, a man who will presume to love you, and what is worse, a man you may probably love to love yourself."

"But all this is imaginary. I'm ashamed of you; one would think you were a young romantic girl."

"Imaginary, is it? What do you think has happened this morning?"

"Has there been an invader here already?"

"Yes, one that you have never thought of."

of, but which is the most powerful of all: I don't like him, and I won't have him."

Monsieur Coulincourt rose, and clasping his daughter to his heart, heaved a deep sigh of relief.

"I thought you would want to get married; all young girls are said to want to get married."

of, but which is the most powerful of all: I don't like him, and I won't have him."

Monsieur Coulincourt rose, and clasping his daughter to his heart, heaved a deep sigh of relief.

"I thought you would want to get married; all young girls are said to want to get married."

"But they have not such fathers as I have; now come to breakfast, and make yourself perfectly easy on the score of love, for I shall never, as long as I live, leave you."

Now, when Mlle. Cecile spoke in this way, she was telling the truth; but not all the truth, for she was giving her father to understand that she had no affection for him, and that she never intended to marry. M. Coulincourt had made an idol of his daughter; after his wife's death he had consecrated his life to this child, and gradually he had grown to look on all who sought to share her affection with jealousy, such as almost a lover might have felt.

But with all this, M. Coulincourt knew that every girl in France is expected to be married between the ages of eighteen and twenty; an old maid is a disgrace in France, and all the wife's and her own relations were importunate for him to find a match for his daughter. She was beautiful, young and charming, and possessed a handsome dowry; pretensions were not wanting. M. Coulincourt felt that if a doom threatened him, he was afraid to talk to Cecile on the subject, so the positive declaration he had drawn from his daughter that morning caused him more happiness than he had known for many years. But after all it was an Eve-like, womanish answer she gave him; he did love one more better than her father, and the happiness of her life depended on her marriage.

Many years before, Cecile, then being only six years old, was sitting in her father's carriage, driving along the high road in a country place where her father had hired a residence for the summer, had spied a boy three or four years older than herself, sitting on the way-side crying. Cecile, who was leaning out of the carriage, and the next minute she was by the side of the child, inquiring into his grief, and forcing into his hand the cakes and cherries with which she had been supplied.

Cecile had been a blessing to him. Coulincourt would say, "from the moment her aunt laid her in my arms. I owe the prosperity of my house to her, for she gave me Adrian."

Adrian felt the deepest gratitude to both the merchant and his daughter. He was a fine, generous nature, that does not shrink from obligation. But the sentiment he felt for his father's daughter, as he grew older, naturally assumed a different aspect. To both he was devoted; but as he saw her expand into loveliness, both in mind and person, he confessed he came to love Cecile passionately, deeply. But he concealed his passion as he would have concealed a crime, to seek an alliance which was so infinitely beneath what Cecile had a right to expect. But Cecile had not been as blind as her father to Adrian's feelings, neither was she so stupid as to suppose that she had made up her mind to marry Adrian, and she had with her woman's tact discovered his love for her.

On the day of her explanation with her father, Cecile contrived, on some vain pretext—she often undertook commissions for her father—summon Adrian to her presence. She had determined to make him declare his sentiments, for she felt that the time had come when she would have to combat all her relations determined on keeping her to herself.

Adrian was so timid in her presence that she felt she had to encourage him; so after a little insignificant conversation, Cecile said to him, "I have seen the letter your father addressed to her father by Colonel de Lacy."

"I have," said Cecile, "and I am thinking of it. I have forgotten it, I was thinking of it."

"What is it about?"

"Well—"

"Now, sir, if you dare to have a thought you have not communicated to me you had better look out!"

"Indeed, I have not."

"Let me cross-examine you."

"Well—"

"Are your affairs in order?"

"Yes."

"Has no house where you had money failed?"

"None."

"Are you prepared to meet all your notes?"

"Yes."

"Have you made any bad speculations?"

"No."

"Are you not satisfied with Adrian?"

"Absurd; you know Adrian is devoted to me heart and soul."

"Well, then, what were you thinking about?"

"You."

"Me, about me, and you dare look serious, almost sad when you are thinking of me? This is worse than anything. Pray, what thoughts could I inspire you with that could make you look so sad and serious?"

"Thoughts inspired by last night's ball."

"Why, they should be merry thoughts; wasn't it the very queen of the ball? Didn't I dance with you there, and were you not surrounded by all the young men in the room?"

"Yes, greeted I was, and overwhelmed with wine and refreshments handed to me on all sides, and that has made me melancholy, for I am afraid of losing the treasure which I have told these many years."

"Why? Do you think these young gentlemen were robbers in disguise, or ain't you sure of the very queen of the ball?"

"Cecile, Cecile, you are laughing at your father; the treasure I mean is yourself."

"Have those men any intention of carrying me off? What a pity they should be such dangerous characters, for they walk so well."

"Don't pretend to misunderstand me, Cecile, you know exactly what I mean. You knew that you were admired by everybody, and you know what is likely to follow this admiration of a parcel of young men."

"No, I don't."

"It is too bad to think that after a life spent in loving you, in making you what you are—beautiful, amiable, good, accomplished—just because you are a girl, I am to give you, yes, give you up to a domestic invader called a son-in-law, a man who will carry you off from me, a man who will presume to love you, and what is worse, a man you may probably love to love yourself."

"But all this is imaginary. I'm ashamed of you; one would think you were a young romantic girl."

"Imaginary, is it? What do you think has happened this morning?"

"Has there been an invader here already?"

"Yes, one that you have never thought of."

of, but which is the most powerful of all: I don't like him, and I won't have him."

Monsieur Coulincourt rose, and clasping his daughter to his heart, heaved a deep sigh of relief.

"I thought you would want to get married; all young girls are said to want to get married."

"But they have not such fathers as I have; now come to breakfast, and make yourself perfectly easy on the score of love, for I shall never, as long as I live, leave you."

Now, when Mlle. Cecile spoke in this way, she was telling the truth; but not all the truth, for she was giving her father to understand that she had no affection for him, and that she never intended to marry. M. Coulincourt had made an idol of his daughter; after his wife's death he had consecrated his life to this child, and gradually he had grown to look on all who sought to share her affection with jealousy, such as almost a lover might have felt.

But with all this, M. Coulincourt knew that every girl in France is expected to be married between the ages of eighteen and twenty; an old maid is a disgrace in France, and all the wife's and her own relations were importunate for him to find a match for his daughter. She was beautiful, young and charming, and possessed a handsome dowry; pretensions were not wanting. M. Coulincourt felt that if a doom threatened him, he was afraid to talk to Cecile on the subject, so the positive declaration he had drawn from his daughter that morning caused him more happiness than he had known for many years. But after all it was an Eve-like, womanish answer she gave him; he did love one more better than her father, and the happiness of her life depended on her marriage.

Many years before, Cecile, then being only six years old, was sitting in her father's carriage, driving along the high road in a country place where her father had hired a residence for the summer, had spied a boy three or four years older than herself, sitting on the way-side crying. Cecile, who was leaning out of the carriage, and the next minute she was by the side of the child, inquiring into his grief, and forcing into his hand the cakes and cherries with which she had been supplied.

Cecile had been a blessing to him. Coulincourt would say, "from the moment her aunt laid her in my arms. I owe the prosperity of my house to her, for she gave me Adrian."

Adrian felt the deepest gratitude to both the merchant and his daughter. He was a fine, generous nature, that does not shrink from obligation. But the sentiment he felt for his father's daughter, as he grew older, naturally assumed a different aspect. To both he was devoted; but as he saw her expand into loveliness, both in mind and person, he confessed he came to love Cecile passionately, deeply. But he concealed his passion as he would have concealed a crime, to seek an alliance which was so infinitely beneath what Cecile had a right to expect. But Cecile had not been as blind as her father to Adrian's feelings, neither was she so stupid as to suppose that she had made up her mind to marry Adrian, and she had with her woman's tact discovered his love for her.

On the day of her explanation with her father, Cecile contrived, on some vain pretext—she often undertook commissions for her father—summon Adrian to her presence. She had determined to make him declare his sentiments, for she felt that the time had come when she would have to combat all her relations determined on keeping her to herself.

Adrian was so timid in her presence that she felt she had to encourage him; so after a little insignificant conversation, Cecile said to him, "I have seen the letter your father addressed to her father by Colonel de Lacy."

"I have," said Cecile, "and I am thinking of it. I have forgotten it, I was thinking of it."

"What is it about?"

"Well—"

"Now, sir, if you dare to have a thought you have not communicated to me you had better look out!"

"Indeed, I have not."

"Let me cross-examine you."

"Well—"

"Are your affairs in order?"

"Yes."

"Has no house where you had money failed?"

"None."

"Are you prepared to meet all your notes?"

"Yes."

"Have you made any bad speculations?"

"No."

"Are you not satisfied with Adrian?"

"Absurd; you know Adrian is devoted to me heart and soul."

"Well, then, what were you thinking about?"

"You."

"Me, about me, and you dare look serious, almost sad when you are thinking of me? This is worse than anything. Pray, what thoughts could I inspire you with that could make you look so sad and serious?"

"Thoughts inspired by last night's ball."

"Why, they should be merry thoughts; wasn't it the very queen of the ball? Didn't I dance with you there, and were you not surrounded by all the young men in the room?"

"Yes, greeted I was, and overwhelmed with wine and refreshments handed to me on all sides, and that has made me melancholy, for I am afraid of losing the treasure which I have told these many years."

"Why? Do you think these young gentlemen were robbers in disguise, or ain't you sure of the very queen of the ball?"

"Cecile, Cecile, you are laughing at your father; the treasure I mean is yourself."

"Have those men any intention of carrying me off? What a pity they should be such dangerous characters, for they walk so well."

"Don't pretend to misunderstand me, Cecile, you know exactly what I mean. You knew that you were admired by everybody, and you know what is likely to follow this admiration of a parcel of young men."

"No, I don't."

"It is too bad to think that after a life spent in loving you, in making you what you are—beautiful, amiable, good, accomplished—just because you are a girl, I am to give you, yes, give you up to a domestic invader called a son-in-law, a man who will carry you off from me, a man who will presume to love you, and what is worse, a man you may probably love to love yourself."

"But all this is imaginary. I'm ashamed of you; one would think you were a young romantic girl."

"Imaginary, is it? What do you think has happened this morning?"

"Has there been an invader here already?"

"Yes, one that you have never thought of."

of, but which is the most powerful of all: I don't like him, and I won't have him."

Monsieur Coulincourt rose, and clasping his daughter to his heart, heaved a deep sigh of relief.

"I thought you would want to get married; all young girls are said to want to get married."

INSURANCE.

SAINT LOUIS Mutual LIFE INSURANCE CO., OF ST. LOUIS, MO.

Capital Stock, as an original basis $100,000
Assets July 1st, 1864, - - - $329,056 66
Dividend (Declared to Policy Holders, Jan. 1, 1864, - - -) 40 per cent.

The following, showing the entire amount of losses incurred and promptly paid by this company since its organization, January, 1858, gives ample evidence of the care and promptness exercised in the selection of the risks and its assets also show its complete success, and that Western men and Western institutions are as fully reliable and quite as safe as those of the East or North. We invite all Policies in all the forms to be obtained in any company.

LOSSES IN 64 YEARS ONLY $31,500.
Where is there a company that can make a better showing?

Dividends to policy holders declared annually on the first of January (this year 40 per cent), based on the assets and profits of the company.

DIRECTORS.
JAMES H. LITTON, President.
BENJAMIN PRATER, Vice-President.
JOHN H. LITTON, Secretary.
JOHN H. LITTON, Treasurer.
JOHN H. LITTON, Cashier.
JOHN H. LITTON, Auditor.

OFFICERS.
JAMES H. LITTON, President.
BENJAMIN PRATER, Vice-President.
JOHN H. LITTON, Secretary.
JOHN H. LITTON, Treasurer.
JOHN H. LITTON, Cashier.
JOHN H. LITTON, Auditor.

LOCAL BOARD OF REFERENCE.
JAMES H. LITTON, President.
BENJAMIN PRATER, Vice-President.
JOHN H. LITTON, Secretary.
JOHN H. LITTON, Treasurer.
JOHN H. LITTON, Cashier.
JOHN H. LITTON, Auditor.

MEDICAL EXAMINERS.
JAMES H. LITTON, President.
BENJAMIN PRATER, Vice-President.
JOHN H. LITTON, Secretary.
JOHN H. LITTON, Treasurer.
JOHN H. LITTON, Cashier.
JOHN H. LITTON, Auditor.

CONNECTICUT Mutual Life Insurance Company OF HARTFORD.

Capital, over $1,000,000.
Dividends 10 per cent. for 15 years, and paid during the lifetime of the insured.

CITY REFERENCE.
C. M. Warren & Co., 100 N. 2nd St., St. Louis.
Burton, Clements & Co., 100 N. 2nd St., St. Louis.
J. H. LITTON, 100 N. 2nd St., St. Louis.

RYAN & CARPENTER, State Agents, Main street.

JONES & TAPP, FURNISHING GOODS, Large Stock, And invite the trade to examine before buying.

828 Fourth St., Between Market and Jefferson.

WE WILL OPEN DURING THIS WEEK 3,000 CLOAKS, CLOAKS, CLOAKS, DINGFELDER & GOLDMAN'S

328 Fourth St., Between Market and Jefferson.

Of the newest and latest styles. Wholesale dealers will find it to their advantage to examine our stock of Cloaks.

Ladies, before purchasing elsewhere, would do well to call and examine our stock of Cloaks.

We also call attention to our large and complete stock of seasonable goods, which we offer at the reduced New York prices.

JOHN H. LITTON, JOHN H. LITTON, JOHN H. LITTON.

STEIN, ZANG & BRO., PRACTICAL GAS AND STEAM FITTERS, Plumbers, Medical College Building, corner of Fifth and Green streets, Louisville, Ky.

WATER PLUMBERS, Gas Fitters, Brass Work and Steam Valves, Jobbing promptly attended to.

L. H. TYSON, Merchant Tailor, 374 SIXTH STREET, BETWEEN MARKET AND MAIN (Under Plaster's Hotel), LOUISVILLE, KY.

MASON & HAWKINS, MERCHANT TAILORS, And Dealers in Furnishing Goods, No. 407 Third Street, bet. Green and Jefferson, opposite the Market.

HAVE NOW ON HAND A VERY LARGE STOCK of Cloths, Casimeres, Vestings, &c. They are prepared to suit gentlemen with the best of material, and guarantee satisfaction. Call and see for yourselves. Fourth street, between Jefferson and Green.

F. FABEL & CO., MANUFACTURERS OF LARD OIL, SOAPS, STAR AND TALLOW CANDLES, 111 Main street, bet. First and Second, LOUISVILLE, KY.

J. H. MONTGOMERY, MERCHANT TAILOR, No. 319 Second St., bet. Third and Fourth, LOUISVILLE, KY.

HAVE JUST RETURNED FROM NEW YORK with a large stock of goods, which we will sell at a low price. Call and see for yourselves. Call on No. 215 and 217, bet. Third and Fourth, Louisville, Ky.

WE WOULD INFORM THE OFFICERS OF LOUISVILLE, that we have received a large stock of goods, which we will sell at a low price. Call and see for yourselves. Call on No. 215 and 217, bet. Third and Fourth, Louisville, Ky.

MEDICAL.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.